NEW-YORK WANTS A BETTER REPRESENTATIVE

TEAM THAN THIS-THE SCORE. The New-York baseball team met its third defeat at the hands of the sprightly Boston players at the Polo Grounds yesterday. After the game, Manager Mutric remarked: "Hard luck, boys; baseball hard luck. We'll get there yet. It's a long lane which has no turning."
Then there was a chorus of "Rats!" and Mutrie escaped. Then there was a energy of "Rats" and Mutric escaped.
That striking sign which has adorned the club-house was torn down and then torn up. The sign read: "United, greater and stronger than ever." Such sentiments are at variance with the record of the last three days.
The Giants outbatted their rivals, but were outplayed

The Grants of the game by their livelier and more energetic opponents. Clark could not catch Rusic, and O'Rourke's legs were continually having collisions and O'Rouse is the Continually having collisions. He fell down, threw the ball in the wrong place, and did other silly things for a man of his years. Nine Scandiother sing minigrants could not have run the bases more hadly. Toward the close nobody would have been surprised if some Giant, after making a hit, had started for on balls and on Glasscock's sacrifice, Quinn to Tucker,

O'Rourke made a hit in the third. Then Roger Connor loomed up at the plate with his wicked-looking bat. Boston "Pretzel" hurled a fat-cheeked ball toward him, and Conner landed on it with all his avoirdupols. Biff! and then Stovey made tracks for the carriages in whir! and then Stavey made tracks for the carriages in right field in wild pursuit of the rapidly relling sphere. Of course O'Rourke scored, and a moment afterward Mr. Conner thundered up the base line from third, with a clean home run to his credit. This made everybody goodnatured, but they were all deluded.

strein's retirement from the box. O'Rourke drove one the left-field fence for two bases, and scored on a milar hit to right by Connor. Connor in turn came home on a hot line drive to centre for a base by Glasscock. The Hub batsmen didn't have to bat in the first inning.

They merely stood patiently by the plate and got Rusie tch in wild balls. Long got a base in this manner, went clear to third on Clark's wild throw to catch on second. Stovey was another base-on-balls rewrotched throw, Long scoring and Stovey going on to third. The latter was caught at the plate.

Tucker's single in the third was a hot one, and Sullivan's fairly yelled with pain when Quinn boomed up a high fly over left centre field. O'Rourke shouted "I've got it," and then, in his locomotion to get to it, tangled up his legs and fell down. The ball rolled to the ropes, and Tucker and Sullivan scored, Quinn reaching second, where he was left. Nash opened the fourth with a scorching hit for three bases, and scored on Bennett's single. The latter went to second on Getzein's sacrifice, and ran home on Long's basehit to left. The Bostons clinched matters in the lifth ina sacrifice and scored on Quinn's single. Quinn raced to second on the throw-in, and scarppered round to the plate on Bredie's hit to left. This drive was picked up by O'Rourke and thrown to Denny, who muffed, Brodie scoring. Long made a single for the Beancaters in the next inning, and source on Stovey's rattling three-bagger to the right field types. That ended Roston's work on the base-paths, but it was of sufficient magnitude to make the Giants look puny and weak. The score:

MISS GARDNER TELLS HER OWN STORY. The principal feature of interest in the trial at Newark yesterday of Miss Lucy Gardner, on a charge of larceny of goods from Stern Brothers, was the appear ance of the defendant on the witness stand. Gardner, a slender, good-looking young woman, was dressed in black, and wore cream-colored, undressed kid gloves. She was perfectly composed on the wit-ness stand, and proved a good witness.

The witness first told of buying goods of Stern Brothers in 1889, and when the box came home of finding the goods bought were missing. She complained to the driver, and he said that the blunder must have been made by the packer. She reported the mat-ter to the firm and was told to duplicate her order. third instead of first.

But Jeremiah Denny, that ex-Hoosier, is in danger of being mobbed. The kind of work he is doing is not work 15 cents a week. He will have to improve or he will look out a his favorite corner of the diamond it, and found it contained only bead fringe. She went it, and found it contained only bead fringe. She went down stairs and told the boy of the mistake. The driver was called in and said: "Madam, this is not what was in the box." She replied, "Well, it is what I found in the box."

She then crossed the street and telegraphed to Stern Brothers, and was told to call at the store. She went over that afternoon, and the manager told her that he could do nothing for her; that she had better go and duplicate her goods. Her cousin, Morris New-York's first scoring was done in the opening go and duplicate her goods. Her cousin, Morris ning. After Gore had retired on a long fly to Brodis Leavitt, was present when she opened the package in pasing. After Gore had retired on a long by the control of the ball to right for two bases, and came her room. A few days afterward ner moune, the rested. She called upon Stern Brothers and asked rested. She called upon Stern Brothers and asked what they meant by such outrageous conduct. The reply was that some one had been sent to East Orange to settle the case. She was arrested later on the charge. The witness was then advised by Mr. Pratt, her counsel to go to Stern Brothers' and make certain She did so, and purchased a silk handkerchief, which she paid for, and directed to be sent to her home in East Orange. When the package arrived.

On cross-examination the witness said she boarded A mild streak of batting in the seventh raised the droping spirits of the cranks, and ultimately caused correles retirement from the box. O'Roughe drays one objected to this questioning. It was explained that the defendant had had the same trouble about pillaged packages when she lived in Brooklyn, and also that she had had similar experiences with other tradesmen. Judge Kirkpatrick ruled the testi-mony out.

The prosecutor asked: "Why did you not carry the handkerchief home with you?"
"I never carry parcels," the witness replied smilned.

"I never carry a handkerchief don't you?"

"But you carry a handkerchief don't you?"

"Yes, but this was a gentleman's handkerchief."

"Do you never carry a handbag!"

"No sir, never."

"Interest the stand she was warm When Miss Gardner left the stand she was warmly When Miss Gardner left the stand she was warmly greeted by three female friends in pretty spring costumes who had come to court with her. The defence rested and some rebuttal testimony was submitted. Annie Harrigau a salesgirl at stern Brothers' testified that the kind of bead work which Miss Gardner said she found in the box was not in the stock of Stern Brothers in December, 1890. Some further evidence was submitted, and at 2:50 o'clock Judge Kirkpatrick announced that the case was closed. The lawyers then proceeded to sum up. Judge Kirkpatrick will deliver his charge this morning at 10 o'clock.

HE DISAPPEARED A MONTH AGO WITH $65 OF THE CHURCH'S MONEY.

For the last two or three months the member the Holland Reformed Church, in West Eleventh-st. have been collecting money with which to repair the parsonage and church building for the new pastor, the Rev. M. Ossewaard, of Michigan, who is expected to ssume the pastorate in a few days. Among those who received subscriptions was Deacon R. C. Faasen to whom about $65 had been paid. Mr. Faasen had an official stamp of the church, and it was his duty to hand over the money to the church treasurer. Henry J. Vernois, of No. 279 West Eleventh-st. Or had never known of his integrity being questioned, and Fansen has been a member of the Holland Reformed Church ever since he came to America. For the last three years he has been a deacon, and in a short time he would have been made an elder.

The treasurer of the church scouts the idea of Faasen having stolen the money, although he cannot under stand his strange and prolonged absence. He said yesterday that Faasen frequently had handled much larger sums of the church money than the amoun which is now missing; in fact his place as deacon made it necessary for him to receive much of the church funds, and that he had disappeared with the paltry sum of $65 was highly improbable. At Fassen's boarding place, No. 131 West Six-teenth-st., no word has been received from him since he wrote from Philadelphia, five weeks ago, when he failed to give any address. It was said, however, that he had been much distressed by news he had recently received from Holland, which was that his father had married again, much against the to his second wife, leaving the young man nothing. roung woman of this city, and had counted on some of his father's money with which to start, housekeeping. On receiving the news of his father's second marriage and the disposition of the property, a little more than four weeks ago, Faasen became despondent, and now that he has so strangely disappeared and nothing has been heard from him for so long a time it forced by more than he has committed suicide.

One man was crushed beneath tons of earth and stone and when dug out was almost dead. He was removed to the City Hospital. He is dangerously injured.

John Smith had such an uncommon name that he felt compelled to do the uncommon thing of marrying a woman thirty-eight years old, after he had reached the age of seventy-eight. The ceremony took place on October 24, 1888, in New-Jersey. They came to this city to live in a boarding-house at No. 114 East Twenty-fifth-st. Mrs. Smith's conduct was such that his suspicions were aroused soon after their arrival at the boarding-house, and he finally decided to leave the State Senator Marsh to-day will apply to Judge boarding-house to get away from all the scandal and gossip which had been raised. So he and his wife went to live at his son's house, at No. 800 Lexington-

> Mrs. Smith went out a good deal, and finally Mr. Smith's son appointed himself a committee of one to discover how his father's wife, who was youthful in comparison with his father, spent her time while away from home. He discovered her at Tony Pastor's Theatre with another man. After the theatre the ouple went to a restaurant, and from there to the Grand Union Hotel, where they remained all the evening. The young man did not have any witnesses with him this time, so he went home and waited further developments. One evening soon afterward he followed her to Jacobs's Theatre, and learned that she met the same man. Again the programme of the other evening was followed, and the couple went to the Grand Union Hotel. This time Mr. Smith took care to have witnesses who knew his father's wife, and they went to the room occupied by the couple. Mr. Smith rapped to the room occupied by the couple. Mr. Smith rapped ioudly on the door, and called out excitedly that the water was leaking from the pipes in the room, and that he was a plumber and must get in immediately to repair the water pipes. He secured evidence upon which to found the divorce suit. This is the story told by Mr. Smith in adhadatic used before Judge Bookstaver. SUICIDE OF A PASSENGER ON THE GERMANIC The captain of the White Star steamer Germanic hich arrived yesterday, reported that on April 19 Charles Russell, a steerage passenger, twenty-six years old, jumped overboard and was drowned. A eavy sea was running at the time, and, though a boat was promptly lowered, the body could not be seen. Russell was a bootmaker by trade and came from Man-chester. England. It was evident that he intended to commit suicide. Before he jumped overboard he gave his watch to a fellow-passenger, saying he would ve no more need of it.

CELEBRATING ARBOR DAY IN ADVANCE.

The students and teachers of the New-York College or the Training of Teachers celebrated Arbor Day yesterday, almost two weeks before the date, May 8, applated by the Superintendent of Public Education, The regular programme, however, was carried out The services opened with the singing of songs and the exiting of poems relating to trees. After the music and recitations, the students planted two elms in Washington Square. Each pupil placed a spade full of earth over the roots of the trees, which were dedi-cated to Miss Grace H. Dodge and Mrs. Peter W. Bryen. An interesting address, appropriate to the occasion, was delivered by Walter L. Harvey, dean of the college. A vote was then taken, in accordance with Superintendent Draper's instructions, upon the State flower. The choice lay between the golden rod and the rose.

TO AID THE GRANT FUND.

THE ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN AT THE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.

The sale of boxes and seats for the "Allegory of the War in Song," in aid of the Grant Monument Fund, to be given at the Madison Square Garden Amphitheatro on the afternoon and evening of May 2, will take piace at 4 p. m. to-day at No. 240 Fifth-ave. The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Grant Monument Association, and the whole will be arranged so as to represent the following episodes of the war: "The Power of Patriotic Song, "Uprising at the North," "On the Field," "After the Battle," and "The Veteran's Return." The managing director is A. B. de Frece. There will be a military display by the Grand Army of the Republic, under the direction of Colonel John H. Ammon, and the veterans will appear with tattered flags and battleworn uni forms. The following choral societies and choirs will assist: Arion Society, Cooper Union Club, Haydn Society of the Harlem Young Men's Christian Association, Nyack Choral Society, St. Cecilian Society of Newark, Stamford Oratorio Society, Greenwich Oratorio Society, Greenwich Choral Union, C. Mortimer Wiske's Choral Societies of New-York and Brooklyn First Methodist Episcopal Church Choir of Roselle, Plymouth Church and St. Pcter's Church choirs of Brooklyn, First Presbyterian, South and Madison Avenue Baptist Church choirs, and st. John's Chorus. The following letter was recently sent to John F.

Here is Mr. Plummer's answer:

I am in receipt of your favor of the 8th inst., and note your request in behalf of the Grant Monument Fund. It is one of several communications received suggesting the use or final disposition that I might be inclined to make of this National relic. The original verses of "Marching Through Georgia," written as a personal memento and signed by General William T. sherman, I shall always keep in my possession. I fully recognize its value in the eyes of his countrymen and comrades, and am most willing to do anything to give pleasure. I am also impressed with the thought that the love and admiration General Sherman cherished for General Grant would have secured his approval of my conceding to your request.

With the hope that it may bring speedy and material aid toward the erection of the monument, already too long delayed, and the assurance of the pleasure it affords me to be thus able to co-operate, I consent to its use as proposed in the sole interest of the fund you have the honor to represent. Here is Mr. Plummer's answer:

ALDERMEN NOT A HAPPY FAMILY.

A WAR OF WORDS AGAIN OVER THE UNION SQUARE FLOWER MARKET.

The new Park Commissioner, ex-Judge A. B. Tappen, appeared for the first time in his new capacity at the meeting of the Park Board yesterday. President Gallup and Commissioner Straus made their venerable associate welcome. When the flower market question came up, Aldermen John Morris and Flynn fought their battles over again, using many choice phrases with which spectators at the Common Council meetings have become familiar. The ball was opened by the opponents of the Union Square site. Darsley, secretary of the Market Florists' Association, attacked the method adopted by the promoters of the scheme in obtaining the consent of the board. His own name, he said, had been used as one favoring the new market, but it was unauthorized. The space at Union Square was not large enough, and the market would not be successful with such short hours for the sale of products. There was plenty of room at the old Canal-st, site, but the present plan divided the business and injured it. Aldermen Mead and Ryder, representing the IXth and Vth Districts, informed the Commissioner that they were opposed to the removal to Union Square, and both looked hard at Alderman Morris when they asserted that any representations to the contrary were without foundation. They insisted that the sentiment of the West Side was against the Alderman Flynn trumpeted a declaration that the names signed to the petition presented by Alderman John Morris, on which the board had acted in opening the new market, were forged.

President Nicol, of the Florists' Association, explained that his objection was not to Union-Square, but he thought that the Canal-st. site was greatly preferable. "The whole fact of the matter," he added, "is that Alderman Morris is a monomanic on the subject and will not listen to reason."

Alderman Morris told the board that the real object of the Florists' Association was to move the market to Union Square, but some of the members did not seem to know their own minds. Alderman Flynn put in his oar again with the suggestion that the board ought to be induced by the Fiorists' Association, but he was intrupted by Alderman Morris.

"What's the use of taking about that?" exclaimed the latter. "Half of the opponents of the Union square site are not members of the association at all. They are outsiders—longshoremen—dock-rats."

"Who are you calling a dock-rat?" demanded Alderman Flynn. "Fil not stand here and be called a dock-rat by you or anybody eise."

Nobody can say how the war of words between these two Tammany Aldermen might have ended if President Gallup had not ordered the room cleared for executive business. to know their own minds. Alderman Flynn put in At their private meeting the Commissioners decided

THE FEREYBOAT PLUNGED INTO THE BRIDGE. A peculiar accident happened to the Staten Island ferryboat Northfield yesterday. She left New-York at 12:30 p. m. for St. George with nearly 300 passengers on board. When the captain rang for the engineer to stop and reverse his engines as the boat entered the slip at St. George, the engineer found that something was the matter with the machinery and the engines could not be reversed. He immediately called up through the speaking-tube to the pilot-house, saying that the engines would not reverse, and the captain called to the people in the front of the boat to go inside the cabins. Policeman Riordan, who was on duty on the boat, began to drive the people back from the front the boat, began to drive the people back from the front of the boat. Just then she struck the bridge of the ferryslip, and, having considerable headway, she struck it hard. The bridge was thrown out of place and the forward rudder and the bows of the boat were damaged. People were thrown from their feet, and for a few moments there was considerable excitement, Policeman Riordan was thrown against the pole of a brewery wagon and was badly injured, but it is not thought fatally.

The passengers, though badly shaken up, were not thought fatally.

The passengers, though badly shaken up, were not injured. The accident to the machinery being repaired, the boat proceeded under her own steam to one of the lower landings, where she will be repaired.
